

What is an Interior Designer?

As many of you know hiring a licensed Interior Designer provides you with more than just aesthetic decisions for your homes and/or work spaces. A licensed designer is usually trained and experienced in the different aspects of design (spatial relationships, functionality, efficiency, safety, construction process, etc.)

Noon Design Group, differs from many other design companies because of our attention to architectural details inside and out. Noon Design Group's is mostly educated in Architecture and very experienced in construction. We find this to be extremely helpful to our clients.

Anyone can select a nice piece of art and hang it on a wall; whereas an interior designer can use that piece of art as a springboard for creating a fabulous living space.

Feeling a Little Green lately?

When it comes to Green remodeling, you don't have to remodel everything, but anything you can do will help. Here are a few recycling/eco-friendly design ideas:

- Buy antiques or used furniture
- Reupholstering can give a new look to an old piece of furniture
- Move artwork and furniture around as frequent as needed to change the appearance of a room
- When purchasing furniture or other large home items invest in good quality, classic pieces.

Congratulations!!

We've had the pleasure of completing a few children's rooms recently and we'd like to share them with you. We've found they are fun and limitless and we are looking forward to executing many more of them. We transformed the baby's room to a Princesses Paradise (picture on left). I'd like to welcome Baby Sloan to the world. I hope you like it as much as your mom and I do.

The picture on the right shows Julian's (the coolest kid on the block and my son) room. Michael and I had lots of fun transforming this room and I know from seeing Julian playing in his room all the time that he likes what we did.
